I steal them of course! <g The joke, sound, and most of the graphics are from my MS Greetings CD. The script and presentation are mine.

I don't think I would buy the Greetings 2000 unless you could get it very cheap, I paid $1 at a Walgreen's closeout.... It causes a lot of problems on my system, and I almost always have to load it from a fresh re-boot. It's totally useless for email if you ask me. Most messages are between 300kb and 600kb if sent using the program. Then they arrive as *.exe files in your mailbox that don't even work right. Their scripts usually run way over 50kb, written in javascript for most email/browser programs. Again, useless and bulky for our purposes here. On the up side It makes wonderful printed cards and stationery, and has oodles of verse for the cards. The email projects can be stripped out and used as a model for a rewrite. There is a Greetings 2001 out now that might have the bugs worked out. Don't know, I don't have it but I plan to get it. I think Ralphie and Aleeta have the Greetings 2000, ask them what they think of it.
